

European sustainability reporting requirements on large companies result in overwhelming disclosure requests on SME suppliers. Aligning your reporting to VSME, within the European Sustainability Reporting Standard, is the best way to anticipate disclosure requests and bring your reporting up to industry standard.

European Sustainability Reporting Standards

The European Commission created EFRAG to develop sustainability reporting standards.

EFRAG provides technical advice to the European Commission in the form of ESRS.

Standards are created via ESRS to ensure comparable and measurable ESG reporting for large and small businesses.

VSME applies to non-listed SMEs with direct or indirect exposure to the EU through trade or services.

TDH estimates it costs SMEs more than €25,000 per annum to respond to supply chain questionnaires.

Once Only Principle

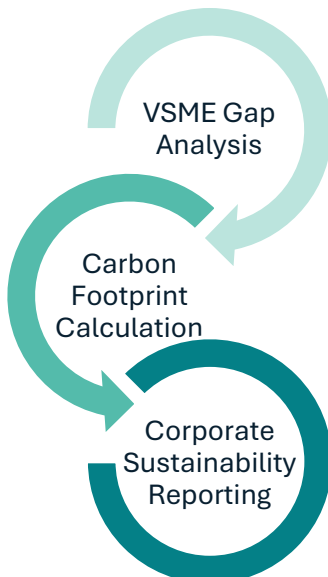

It is intended that following VSME will save businesses time and money by providing proportionate and sufficient information to meet Requests for Information (RFIs) for all partners. This will benefit SMEs by reducing the need to produce multiple reports for different customers.

Get Supply Chain Ready

Taking an ESG Assessment is the first step to preparing for European sustainability reporting requirements. This provides you intelligent insights on what your current gaps are to the regulation, as well as industry best practice.

From there, the Disruption House can provide you all the tools to bring your practices up to standard including carbon footprint calculation and full corporate Sustainability Reporting.

About The Disruption House

Since 2015, The Disruption House has delivered affordable, actionable and authentic ESG and operational resilience insight to improve business performance. No matter the size, service or industry.